Splash out with a pair of embellished or colourful shoes you can wear again after your big day. Think of the cost per wear to assuage any guilt!

PRINCESS BRIDE Peggy wore a lace and tulle ball gown from Inbal Dror's Fall 2015 collection. 'It's truly a one-of-a-kind wedding dress, with hand-embroidered leather, silk thread crochet, pearls and Swarovski crystals on it,' she says. 'The first time I saw my wedding dress was on Instagram, it was on a model sitting on a little boat by the river. She was like a princess waiting for her prince!' The bride took her wedding planner, Fiona, with her to try the dress on for the first time, because she wanted to surprise her friends as well as her groom. 'The second I put it on, I knew it was the dress for me,' she says.

Peggy, 26, and Bryan, 27, met at a dinner with friends in 2012. On Valentine's Day, while the couple were at the cinema, Bryan had his sister and brother-in-law decorate Peggy's apartment with rose petals and candles. When they arrived home, 'he knelt down and asked, "will you marry me?"' says Peggy. 'All I could do was nod.'

BOND-STYLE The bride chose Bryan's outfit because she is obsessed with the Tom Ford tuxedo Daniel Craig wears as James Bond in Spectre. 'I bought the suit for him as I want him to keep it forever, and in 10 or 20 years when we celebrate our wedding anniversary, we can both wear what we wore on the wedding day. That would be very romantic!'

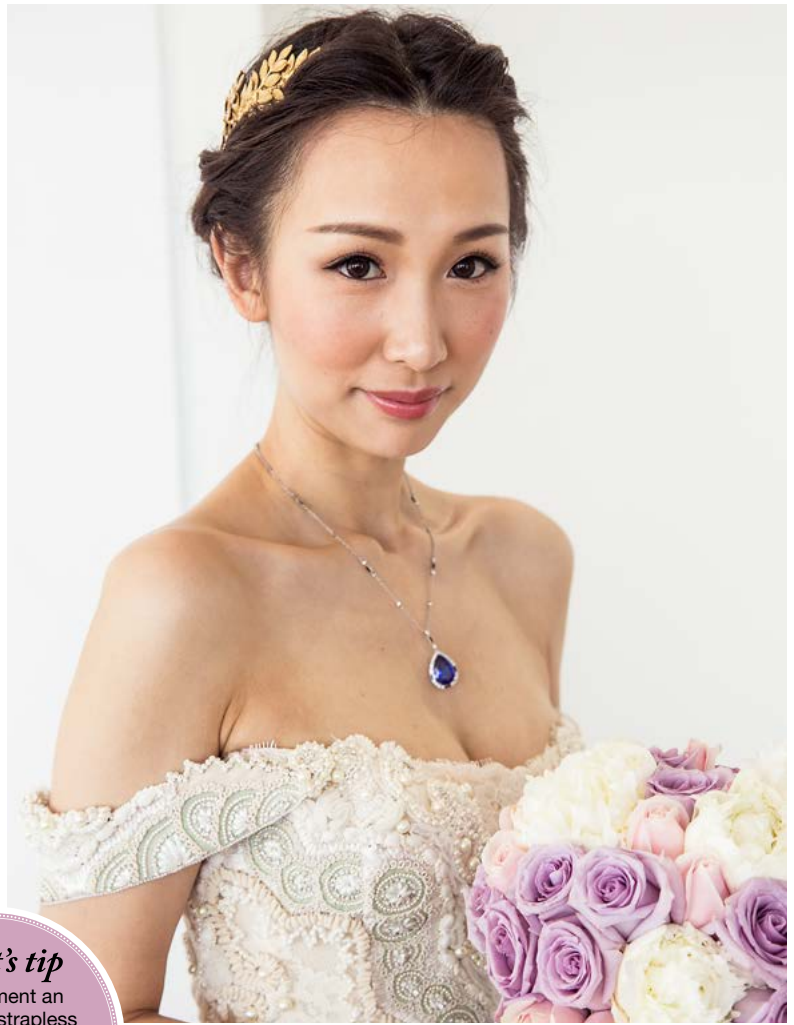

FAIRY TALE After arriving at the ceremony in a traditional horse-drawn carriage, the couple said their vows under a pergola decorated with white drapes and pink and lilac blooms. The aisle was lined with flower petals, and posies decorated the guests' white chairs.

Try different styles of gown to see what works, even if you don't think they'll suit you. Contrary to belief, a petite bride can wear a princess-style dress!

WE DO Peggy's most memorable moment of the ceremony was walking down the aisle on her father's arm, towards Bryan. 'I was very emotional and so excited – at that moment I felt so blessed to be surrounded by my two beloved men, my father and my husband-to-be,' she says. They chose Curzon Hall for their wedding reception primarily because it could accommodate their 400 family and friends. 'Curzon Hall has the capacity for the numbers of guests we wanted, and we really liked the sandstone building. It's like a castle, and has the garden on site, too,' says Peggy. 'We made the decision in our minds on our first visit.'

stylist's tip

Complement an elaborate strapless gown with a stunning, statement necklace – keep the rest of your jewellery subtle.

stylist's tip

Candles displayed, en masse, on a mirrored surface creates a wonderfully romantic lighting effect, and is inexpensive and easy to DIY.

GRAND SCALE 'We created a custom-made bridal table with a floral cascade to the ground in lilacs, purples and whites, and then had an amazing floral wall behind the table with luxury draping,' says Peggy. An installation of white wisteria cascaded from the ceiling, alongside seven chandeliers. 'We had the amazing Scot Finnie play on his white baby grand piano all night under a stunning wisteria tree – it kept all of our guests very well entertained.'

HAPPY SNAPS The couple arranged a photo booth and Instagram printer so friends and family could take home a small keepsake of the day – in addition to the purple box of Laduree Macarons, tied with a mint ribbon. Faye Cahill created the magnificent white, six-tier cake with soft gold mesh lace. Adding Peggy and Bryan's wedding motif was, literally, the icing on the cake.
